Captain Charles Chandler

On February 18, 1969, [redacted]

[redacted] were contacted by a Special Agent of this Bureau.

[redacted] viewed photographs of Marco Antonio Braz De Carvalho, and both advised that they were quite certain that he is identical with the unknown subject number one, who handled the machine gun in the assassination of Captain Charles Chandler on October 12, 1968. They said the fact that the unknown subject wore sun glasses was the only deterrent to making an absolutely positive identification.

[redacted] viewed a photograph of [redacted], and advised he felt quite certain that he is identical to unknown subject number two, except that when [redacted] observed unknown subject number two, he did not appear to have a mustache. The fact that unknown subject number two was wearing sun glasses also prevented an absolutely positive identification.

[redacted], who did not observe unknown subject number two, advised that she did not recognize [redacted] as anyone whom she had met or observed in the past.

Likewise, both [redacted] viewed photographs of [redacted] and [redacted] and did not recognize either of them as anyone they had met or observed in the past.

They further advised that they recognized none of the above names, and [redacted] could not recall any circumstances which would have placed these individuals in contact with Captain Chandler [redacted] leading up to the assassination.
